Harlow's Accidental Journey – Storyline rev.8 10.8.2026

Title locked 10.8.2026: Harlow’s Accidental Journey. (Working project name: Harlow’s Big Adventure / HBA.) Final copy — rev.8 10.8.2026. “Original visual reference” images are Mom’s early art; “Current character reference” thumbnails are the latest canonical designs, including Mom’s “special appearances” Easter-egg characters.

Page 1

Hey there! I'm Harlow, a laid-back Ragdoll cat living the good life in sunny Long Beach, California with my best human friend, Lois. My favorite pastimes boil down to eating, sleeping, and eating some more. I want to share a wild, unexpected journey I had recently — not a story about cat curiosity, but one about the kindness and generosity of strangers. I think you're going to love it.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Lois

Harlow

Page 2

A few days ago, Lois asked, “Hey Harlow, want to drive out to Farrelli Farms for some fresh fruits and veggies and enjoy the country scenery?” Sounded awesome to me, so we hopped into her classic ’65 Mustang for a nice day trip to the country.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Lois

Harlow

Farm Visit

Page 3

“Ah, we finally made it,” I sighed, taking in the rolling green fields as we pulled into Farrelli Farms. Lois was practically shaking with excitement, her eyes locked on a vibrant display of heirloom tomatoes and fresh berries. Seeing her completely mesmerized and in her element, I smiled and decided to wander off to stretch my legs.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Lois

Nero

Harlow

Page 4

“Phew, it's toasty today!” grunted Sweet Pea the pig, splashing in a big muddy puddle. “Come on in! The mud is where it's at to beat the heat.” I crept to the edge, then jumped back, wrinkling my nose. “I appreciate the tip, but have you seen my coat? This fur does not do mud.” “Are you sure? It feels amazing!” Sweet Pea snorted, wiggling happily. “I'll find another way to cool off,” I said. “Lovely meeting you — catch you later!”

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Sweet Pea

Harlow

Page 5

I soon spotted a pond, where Mama Fiona and her ducklings — Missi, Sammi, and Lili — swam over to greet me. “Oh honey, you look miserable!” Fiona said, seeing my dusty, travel-worn coat. “Come take a dip and wash the dust off.” Normally a cat avoids water at all costs, but desperate times call for desperate measures. I took a breath and hopped in — it felt amazing! I scrambled out, shook my fur dry, thanked Fiona and her girls, and set off again.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Mama Fiona

Harlow

Page 6

After a while, I realized I'd wandered far from Lois. Molly the donkey and her baby, Albie, trotted over, sensing I was lost. “Feeling turned around, little guy?” Molly chuckled. “Take a look at our big ears — let them remind you to listen to your surroundings in tight spots.” I swiveled my ears like radar dishes and caught the sound of people talking. “That's brilliant! Thank you, Molly!” I called, nodding to her and Albie as I hurried toward the voices.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Molly

Albie

Dallas

Harlow

Page 7

As I zipped along, giggling came straight from Chester, a retired racehorse! “What’s so funny?” I asked, baffled. “Well,” Chester chuckled, “life on the racetrack could get pretty tough — but I always found something to laugh about to get me through. Always keep your sense of humor, no matter what life hands you!” “I’ll remember that!” I smiled, heading toward the voices with a grin on my face.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Chester

Dynamite

Harlow

Page 8

Hearing voices ahead, I got so excited thinking about telling Lois all about my wonderful new friends that I stopped paying attention. I completely missed a bright red pickup truck being loaded with fruit and vegetable crates for a city delivery. In the rush, farm hands accidentally scooped me up and loaded me into the back. Before I knew it, the engine roared to life, and we were speeding off toward the big city. Yikes!

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Paco

Harlow

City Visit

Page 9

With the truck flying down the highway, I hunkered down until we finally rolled into the bustling city hours later. The second the engine stopped, I bolted. I was free—but looking up at the towering buildings in this unfamiliar city with roaring traffic, my stomach dropped. I was completely lost and had no idea how to get home.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Harlow

Page 10

Wandering the city, my stomach rumbled. I darted down an alley and spotted Philly the rat, eating a slice of pizza. Hunger beat fear — I timidly asked for a bite, and Philly grinned, pushing the box over. “Sure thing! Help yourself, man.” As we munched, he puffed out his chest. “I'm a big deal — I've been in the papers for my pizza heists.” “No way! You're a pro,” I said. “Teach me your ways?” Philly's sly smile said yes — masterclass time.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Philly

French Fry

Harlow

Page 11

Stuffed and grateful for Philly's help, I wandered into Midtown Park to find a quiet spot and figure out a way back home to Long Beach. I spotted an elegant dog with her owner and piped up, "Hey there! I'm Harlow. Could you help me find my way back to Long Beach?" Penelope the Afghan Hound snobbishly tossed her head and replied, "I'm much too busy to talk to you."—though she wasn't doing anything at all. A nearby stray calico couldn't be bothered to help either.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Penelope

Endeavor

Harlow

Page 12

My faith was taking a hit after Penelope. In a rougher part of town, I spotted Otis the coyote — scruffy but friendly. “Hey there, my friend, can I help you out?” he asked. I sighed, relieved. “Yes, thank you! Do you know how to get to Long Beach?” Otis shook his head. “I wish I could help, but I've lived on these streets so long I don't know anywhere else. Good luck — and never let your guard down around here.” I thanked him and headed off.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Otis

Chowder

Monkey

Harlow

Page 13

Feeling braver with Otis' tip, I started asking for help. Gideon the pigeon swooped down from a high ledge. “You look lost, buddy. Where are you headed?” he chirped. “Trying to get back to Long Beach — can you help?” I asked. “Long shot, but the baseball park a few blocks over might have someone who can,” he said, pointing.

“Best I can do — I'm a city bird, never leave town. Best of luck!” Grateful, I set off at once.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Gideon

Tiger

Harlow

Baseball Park Visit

Page 14

Finding the ballpark was a breeze, and I slipped in unnoticed. I heard frantic chittering over the crowd — a nervous squirrel scrambling up a tall pole. “Hey, I'm Harlow!” I called. “What's the emergency?” “I'm Chippy, racing up this pole for peanuts!” he squeaked. “Peanuts sound amazing! Teach me to pole-climb?” Chippy squinted down. “Sure — but you'd do better on the ground, where fans drop buttery popcorn everywhere.” The floor was a giant treasure hunt! “Fair point!” I thanked him and scampered off.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Chippy

Nicholas & Norman

Harlow

Page 15

I'd never seen a baseball game — guys in matching pajamas just tossed a ball around. Suddenly the ground shook. Boom, boom, boom! Out charged a colossal fuzzy bear-like character, waving giant paws. “HELLO EVERYBODY! I'm The Hibernator, your team mascot! Who's ready for fun?!” he roared. “I AM!” I yelled, waving my paws. Even doubting I'd ever get back to Lois, I remembered Chester's golden rule: always keep a sense of humor, no matter what — even if life hands you a giant fuzzy bear!

Original visual reference

Current character reference

The Hibernator

Harlow

Page 16

After the show, fear and loneliness crept back in. In the stands, a friendly face caught my eye. “Howdy,” he said. “I'm Edward the Emotional Support Dog, and this is my friend, Jon. You look a little down in the dumps.” “I'm totally lost,” I confessed. “I'm so sorry,” Edward said. “With patience and persistence, you'll find help. Come give me a hug if you want.” I didn't hesitate — I gave Edward the biggest hug ever and instantly felt better.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Edward

Harlow

Page 17

Feeling better but parched, I wandered to the snack shack, where workers left water bowls out for pets. As I lapped it up, I heard buzzing overhead. “What's a cat like you doing at a ballpark?” asked Jasmine the bumblebee. “Trying to get back to Long Beach,” I answered. Jasmine lit up. “No way! I know Long Beach — just follow my buzz!” One last sip, and off we went.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Jasmine

Harlow

Beach Visit

Page 18

Jasmine led me to the sand and buzzed off, leaving me gazing at the gorgeous ocean. A crab was walking sideways along the shore. “You alright?” I asked. “You're moving strangely.” “I'm fine — that's just how we roll. I'm Babs,” she shot back. “I'm Harlow, trying to get back home,” I said. Babs sighed. “Sorry, I can't help — we crabs only walk sideways. But here's a tip: always look every direction before crossing streets.” I thanked her and meandered on.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Babs

Harlow

Page 19

I'd never seen the ocean, so I crept to the water's edge. Suddenly a giant shark surged out! Finnegan the shark was just as spooked by me. Once we caught our breath, I shared my tale of woe. “I wish I could help, but I can't leave the water,”

Finnegan said. “Remember: the ocean is dangerous if you don't know it. If you don't know — don't go!” “Thanks, Finnegan, I'll remember that,” I said, heading back to dry land.

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Finnegan

Harlow

Page 20

I tripped over something round and lumpy — a penguin napping on the sunny beach! “SQUAWK!” Pebbles the penguin bolted upright, feathers ruffled. “Can't you see I was napping?!” “I'm so sorry!” I blurted. “Aren't you a million miles from home?” Pebbles slumped. “Yeah. Took a wrong turn at a glacier — now I'm totally lost.” “Same boat — though yours is longer,” I sighed. “Good luck, buddy. I hope you find your way home soon!”

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Pebbles

Harlow

Page 21

A massive shadow swept over me — a pelican circling down. “Hey little fella, you look exhausted and lost. Can I help?” she called. “Yes, please!” I squeaked. “I live in Long Beach, but I'm lost.” “Say no more!” she smiled. “I'm Helga — I'll scoop you into my throat pouch and drop you at the start of your road. That's as close as I get without leaving the ocean.” Breathing easier, I replied, “That's beyond perfect. I can't thank you enough!”

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Helga

Cash

Harlow

Page 22

Helga gently lowered me down and I started to recognize some familiar sites around me. But even better, I felt a strong sensation that I wasn't walking alone. Could it be that Guardian Angels have been with me this whole time? I wondered, feeling a wave of peace. I nodded toward the sky in silent thanks to my invisible caretakers—and right on cue, my house finally came into view!

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Mittens

Teddy

Harlow

Page 23

There it was, right in plain sight—MY HOME! “Hooray! I’m finally home!” I shrieked, quivering with excitement. Lois must have heard my paws on the porch, because she whipped the door open and scooped me up into the biggest, tightest hug. “Oh, my darling Harlow, where have you been?!” she gasped, eyes shining. “I was out of my mind with worry, but I’m so happy you’re back. Come inside—I’ve got a delicious tuna dinner waiting for you!”

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Lois

Harlow

Page 24

Settled warmly in front of my cozy fireplace, I looked back on everything that happened. I was completely blown away by how kind and helpful total strangers had been. Since I couldn't repay them, I decided to pay it forward at the very first chance I got. Looking toward the corner near the fireplace, I spotted my first lucky recipient. "I see you over there, my little chum," I whispered with a smile. "How would you like some cheese?"

Original visual reference

Current character reference

Harlow

The End

Special Appearances — Easter-Egg Cast

From Mom's original draft: hidden friends tucked into scenes throughout the book.

- Nero the cat — marketplace with Lois (p.3)
- Dallas the Yorkie — with Molly & Albie on the farm (p.6)
- Dynamite the pony — with Chester the laughing horse (p.7)
- Paco the greyhound — with the red pick-up truck (p.8)
- French Fry the dog — with Philly the rat in the city (p.10)
- Endeavor the calico cat — with Penelope in the city (p.11)
- Chowder & Monkey the Chihuahuas — with Otis the coyote (p.12)
- Tiger the cat — with Gideon the pigeon (p.13)
- Nicholas & Norman the guinea pigs — with Chippy at the baseball park (p.14)
- Cash the cockatiel — with Helga on the beach (p.21)
- Mittens the cat — ghostly guardian angel on the road home (p.22)
- Teddy the cat — ghostly guardian angel on the road home (p.22)